Gould Academy Notes

Teachers and students are enjoying the spring recess of one week. Classes will be resumed on Tuesday morning, April third.

A pleasing innovation in connection with the declamations was shown on Tuesday morning when a scene from "The Merchant of Venice" was admirably presented by Theodore Eames, James Alger and Daniel Wight.

The Seniors will present their play, "O' My Heart," soon after the re-opening of school.

The Girl Reserves are making plans for a community service to be held on a Sunday evening during the first of the spring term.

The Twentieth Century Club held a special meeting on Thursday evening which was a delightful occasion not only for the members of the Club but also for the entire student body.

It was not until Monday that the Club extended an invitation to the school to attend a costume party in the gymnasium on Thursday evening. It would seem that this short notice served as an incentive to the young people to do their best in procuring costumes, for when Thursday evening came, nearly every student appeared in some special garb.

That so much originality could be displayed on such short notice was a surprise to every one present. Whether one looked upon the dignified colonial dresses, the personnel of the gypsy band, or any others of the variety of characters represented, he could not see that much care had been exercised by each person in his attempt to portray the character which he had chosen to represent. The whole effect was most picturesque as the gaiety of the costumes was well exhibited in the dancing which made up the evening's program. The task of the judges in awarding the prizes was a difficult one, but their decision resulted in Miss Helen Carter receiving the prize for the young ladies while Edward Poole was awarded the prize for the young men. Miss Carter was very sweet in a full dress costume, the wooden shoes in no way detracting from her graceful appearance. The Spanish costume worn by Mr. Poole was very striking and elicited many comments. Miss Maxine Clough, who was very attractive in a gypsy costume, received honorable mention. The judges were Mrs. R. R. Tibbets and Mrs. H. H. Hastings.

The affair was planned by a committee chosen from the Faculty and the Senior Class to whom the school is very grateful for an unusually pleasant evening. Coming as it did the evening before the students separated for spring vacation, the party was a fitting climax to the social events of the winter. Such events can but impress the students and their friends of the part that The Twentieth Century Club plays in the social life of Bethel and of the debt of gratitude they owe to its founder, Mrs. J. G. Gehring. The patronesses were Mrs. H. H. Hastings, Mrs. R. R. Tibbets and Miss Litchfield. Music furnished by Lord's Orchestra. Punch was served.

Happy Wedlock Sure Thing If Bride Is Cook

By KATHRYN ST. JOHN

Haphazard meals yearly ruin thousands of marriages. Most marital ships would maintain an even keel if brides knew cooking.

Many of the first year's troubles between newlyweds would be avoided if the wife were capable of preparing foods with an experienced hand. Wives are to blame for the failure of many business men in the final analysis. The business man's health depends a great deal on what he eats. And it's up to his wife to see that he gets the right kind of food. A healthfully balanced diet goes a long way toward making the tired business man less fatigued.

The expert home manager sees to it that her husband never comes home to a deliquescent lunch. There is a carefully planned meal waiting for him. The real housewife knows that an unbalanced diet means trouble and avoids it. Likewise, she appreciates the fact that variation in her menus is important. In this connection the following recipes have been selected as an aid to the home manager:

Frozen Salad.
1/2 cup mayonnaise 1/2 cup candied dressing 1/2 cup diced pine-apple 1/2 cup diced apples 4 tbsp. pineapple 2 tbsp. lemon juice 1/2 cup evaporated milk

Mix the fruit and juices. Combine milk and cream, chill and whip; then fold in the fruit and mayonnaise. Pour into a mold and pack in equal parts of salt and ice. Serve on lettuce leaves. This serves eight.

Orange Bavarian.
1 tbsp. gelatin 1-2 cup evaporated milk 1/2 cup cold water 1/2 cup orange juice 1/2 cup lemon juice 1-2 cup whipping cream 1/2 tsp. salt 1/2 cup sugar

Sink gelatin in cold water, add fruit juices, sugar and salt. Heat in the top of a double boiler until gelatin dissolves. Strain and set in pan of cold water. When mixture begins to set, fold in the evaporated milk and cream which have been beaten stiff.

Banana Ice Cream.
6 very ripe bananas 2 cups evaporated milk 1/2 cup lemon juice 1/2 cup cream 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 tsp. salt

Scrape off adhering fibrous portion on surface of peeled bananas. Mash and rub through a sieve. Add the rest of the ingredients in the order given and stir until all are well blended. Let stand for 20 minutes so that all sugar may dissolve. Freeze in a 1 to 6 salt ice mixture. This recipe makes 1/2 gallon cream.

Proof That Octopus Must Have "Purchase" Experiments have been made in a specially devised tank in order to test the truth of many stories told of octopi attacking bathers and dragging them to the sea bottom.

In the tank with the octopus experimentally placed there was placed a "dummy" of the same specific gravity as a human being, and this was baited with a crab. Attracted by this tempting morsel, the octopus made for the dummy, seized it in its powerful tentacles, and tried to drag it under the water, but without success. It then went to one side of the tank, and, holding onto the edge of the glass with some of its arms, it dragged the prey beneath the surface and crushed the crab shell with its powerful jaws.

It is believed that these experiments afford proof that the octopus can drag its victims far below the surface of the water only near rocks to which it can attach its "anchors."

There is one spot in the Bay of Naples where these creatures attain a large size, and now and then a fisherman is reported catching World News Made Up of Wheat and Chaff

Do not be distressed overmuch by news of evil. This is a wide, wide world. It contains much that is bad, but more that is good. Righteousness is slowly, but surely, triumphing over sin.

If you do not believe that, or merely have not realized it, turn for a moment to contemplation of happier things. Turn your tired eyes from the day's record of evil to the day's golden roll of honor. There is more of good news than of bad news today, every day. There is more to see on the sunny side, and it is more worth seeing.

There are only two reasons for sating at ugly things: either that we know more fully know evil when we meet it, even in gilded robes; or that we may grapple with it and blot it out.

Grand highroads of honor lead to every worthy goal of life. The mud roads are in the lowlands, leading only to dissolution and corruption. If we travel the mud road it is at our own volition.

Sin is not the harvest of life. It is the chaff threshed from the wholesome grain and will be swept from the threshing floor. Why look upon the chaff when the grain is there?

If some days the volume of chaff seems greater than others, know that the threshing has been more thorough. This is a wide, wide world, and full of sweetness for those who would find it.—Helen (Mont.) Record-Herald.

Cable Construction

The Western Union says that an Atlantic cable consists of a central copper wire which carries the electric current. Around this are wound flexible copper tapes, which in case of a break in the wire would carry the current around the gap. This is wrapped with a permalloy tape whose magnetic qualities give the cable its great speed. This metallic part of the cable is first inclosed in a thick covering of gutta-percha, which holds the currents to their path. Around this is a wrapping of jute, which cushions the pressure of several miles of sea water. Eighteen steel armor wires surround the cushion and protect the cable from injury. The whole is inclosed in an outer coating of wrapping of tarred hemp cords.

A Point Problem

The chairman of a 10-2 council in Ireland was not an educated man. He was giving his account of the year's splendid work done by the council. He read the report by the medical officer of health, and quoted the death rate as 129 per thousand.

"Mr. Chairman," asked one of his opponents, thinking to make capital out of his lack of education, "what does 12 point 9 mean?"

"What does it mean?" replied the chairman, looking severely at his questioner. "It means that out of every thousand inhabitants 12 have died and 9 are at the point of death."

Pigs in Clover

In a district near Pretoria, pigsties made of marble and buildings cemented with pure white marble are quite common. Practically every kind of marble is found in this district, which is about forty square miles in extent.

The only reason that this valuable stone is not exploited is because of the lack of transport. The railway does not extend near the district. Stone equal to the best Parian marble could be quarried there if the problem of transport could be solved.

The pint-sized pooch flattered about the hobo's heels and yapped its tiny best.

"Heh-heh! Wat good's dat dog?" "To keep off tramps," indignantly replied the nice old lady.

"Well, now, dat is a good laugh. Wat kin dat little runt do?" "He barks and wakes up the big dogs under the porch."

"X-c-s, m-u-m, good-dog, mum."

Course of Peabody River Changed

The Peabody River, near Gorham, has been changed from its old course to a new canal which has been built this winter, making a great geographic change in Pinkham Notch. The following from the Berlin Reporter will be of interest to our readers:

The canal, built between the first and second bridges on the Glen Road. It is 100 feet wide, 2,000 feet long and necessitated 90,000 cubic yards of excavation in some places 8 to 10 feet deep. It is built through what was dense forest and tons of dynamite have been used and three steam shovels, a stone crusher, several tractors, caterpillar tractors, and teams are used. 150 men have been working continuously in carrying on the work. Numerous roads had to be built and made safe for autos.

A steam plant has been installed to pump water and heat the large garage built to house the trucks. Several shacks have also been built, to give the men a place to eat and a chance to dry their clothing. The cost of this work is being met 100% by the state. When completed the road will be much safer than before and several dangerous curves as well as two bridges, will be eliminated. The canal is prepared to take care of as much water as came during the flood and the dike is much higher than the highest high water mark, so that we can feel reasonably safe in case of another flood.

At the two mile bridge a log crib, with its 4,500 feet long, 15 feet wide and 14 feet high has been built on the south side of the river to control the water so it will keep its course. One abutment to the bridge has been replaced and extensive repairs have been made to the pier and the river, where it fore out the bank and made a new course, will be diverted back to the old channel. A large coffer dam has been built in order to take care of the water so that work can be carried on.

Important Announcement to every owner of a Model T Ford

ON MAY 25, 1927, when Henry Ford first announced his plans for making a new car, he announced also that he would continue to make parts for the Model T Ford. He said:

"The Model T Ford car was a pioneer. It blazed the way for the motor industry and started the movement for good roads everywhere. It broke down the barriers of distance in rural sections, brought people in these sections closer together, and placed education within the reach of everyone. We are still proud of the Model T Ford. If we were not, we would not have continued to make it so long."

For twenty years, the Model T Ford led the automobile industry and it still serves more people than any other automobile. Over one-third of all the automobiles in use today are Model T Fords—an indication of the sturdy worth of the car and its value to people in all walks of life the world over.

The Ford Motor Company will continue to make replacement parts for these cars "until the last Model T is off the road." That is a part of Ford service. That is what Henry Ford meant when he said: "We believe that when a man buys one of our cars we should keep it running for him as long as we can and at the lowest up-keep cost."

Because of this policy a considerable part of the Ford manufacturing plants is given over to the making of parts for the Model T Ford. These replacement parts are made of the same material and in the same way as those from which your car was originally assembled.

Make it a point, therefore, to see the nearest Ford dealer and have him look over your Model T Ford. You may find that a very small expenditure will enable you to get thousands of miles of additional service, and at the same time protect the money you have invested in your car.

STUFFY'S WISH TO BE ADOPTED

(By D. J. Walsh.)

STUFFY RAYMOND, hunched himself closer against his newsstand in an effort to secure all the "cuddles" its scant width afforded. Rain beat down with cold persistence upon his thinly clad shoulders, seeping through his worn slicker and sending cold rivulets trickling down his spine. Stuffy's duty consisted in keeping dry his supply of evening newspapers and magazines and in consequence his own frail body suffered miserably.

Yet Stuffy did not complain. Greater misfortune than a cool drizzling were frequent happenings during his thirty years on this earth and he accepted this mild rebuke of Mother Nature's with stoical fortitude.

Perhaps had Stuffy's mind been unoccupied the misery of the present moment might have caused him to wince, but as it was a weighty reflection and an exciting flight of imagination rendered him oblivious to his discomforts. A headline in one of his newspapers had set him to thinking.
"MILLIONAIRE SHORTS POOR ORPHAN GIRL."

"A millionaire," he mused. "A million dollars—and I haven't a cent!
Not a single dollar that I don't have to buy newspapers or food or some other thing." He sighed philosophically.

"Suppose I was that kid he adopted," he mused. "I was an orphan too! All the automobiles and base balls I'd have!"

He paused, sighing deeply.

"Suppose," he thought, "suppose I was to meet a guy like that, who'd adopt me and everything."

He turned so that he could watch the hurrying pedestrians and automabiles who were rushing homeward through the fall rain. They were well dressed people, most of them, who lived in the immediate vicinity of Stuffy's stand, which stood on a busy corner in a well-to-do neighborhood.

A great car whirled up the misty street splashing high fountains of dirty water. Stuffy eyed the car longingly.

"Suppose," he went on, "the guy in that big car owned a boy like me and could give me—"

The reflection was broken off short by a sudden swerving of the automobile. He glanced up quickly and saw a little girl in the middle of the street. As the driver attempted to stop the car suddenly, despite his efforts the heavy machine swung straight toward the girl and toward Stuffy's stand. In another instant she would have been crushed between the car and the newsstand.

Stuffy acted quickly. Flinging his little body into the street, with one arm he swept up the girl and caught her upon the sidewalk. As he did so the car skidded sideways; the fender struck his retreating form and sent him sprawling in a heap upon the sidewalk.

With a laugh Stuffy arose. Flung for a painful bruise across the small of his back he was unharmed. The girl was on her feet, also crying hysterically, but unhurt.

The sedan paused for an instant and the driver, seeing the two on their feet, sped away. Two onlookers rushed toward the pair, but already Stuffy was comforting the child.

"Don't cry," he said. "It's all over now. You didn't get hurt." He placed his arm around her and patted her head.

"Here, I've got the number of the car," said one of the onlookers, handing Stuffy a slip of paper.

"Huh?" he grunted. "Oh, I don't want it. But wait, maybe the lady wants it. I don't think she was hurt, but she might be."

He thanked the men and led the child into a nearby store. Her tears had ceased to flow by this time, and in a plaintive little voice she told her story.

"My name's Anne Hawthorne and my mother's name's Posilona. You see she got married to my stepfather. He don't bring her no money, and we can't eat and she had to go to work and get sick and couldn't go."

The girl spoke in a dreary, monotonous tone, pausing now and then to sniffle.

"I live down on Albert street, but I come up here," she went on. "A girl in our block was adopted by a mill millionaire so I came up here where there's a lot of millionaires so I could be adopted too, and give my mother lots o' money."

As the girl spoke Stuffy's face reddened. She wanted to be adopted so she could help her mother, he wanted adoption so he could buy automobiles and baseballs. He saw in an instant the futility and wickedness of his dreams.

He clasped her little red hand in his, called to the proprietor of the store to watch his stand and started for Anne's home.

He found her mother a tired, old lady, who, when she saw a young man in a top hat over the door of a grocery store, she was startled at seeing her daughter and thanked Stuffy profusely. Anne took to her childish tricks, the story of the rescue.

Stuffy carefully scrutinized the small, poorly furnished room that served as parlor and bedroom. The only room was as large as the one which occupied the stand that it was dark and dirty, compared with the parlors home, and he chuckled at the idea of Anne's sick mother sitting in so mean a place.

"I ask you stay for supper," said Mrs. Posilona, "but no go nothings good to eat."

"Nothing to eat," commented Stuffy to himself. He never went hungry, for all the plucking and darning he did.

"Just a minute," he said, and extending himself, he dashed out of the door. He returned a few minutes later with a great armful of groceries.

"Now," he said, "we can have a swell supper!"

The grateful woman wept loudly and thanked him over and over again she apologized for not having food.

"You see, Mrs. Posilona, he not come back. He been all time. Last week he shot man and now he in jail. I work but get seek. Now no can do."

Next morning Stuffy was back at his stand early. A tender aura of well-being poured through him yet tingled with it was a poignant feeling of hopelessness. The plight of Mrs. Posilona and Anne had touched him deeply and he made a vow to aid them. His own meager circumstances, however, depreciated his chances, but a silent determination to devise some means of helping them came to him.

As the rich, morning parade of motor cars filed past him, Stuffy felt a sudden return of the desire that had come to him the previous day.

"Suppose one of these guys really would adopt me," he mused. "Give what I couldn't do for Anne!"

"But, chances," he added a moment later, "that's just dreamin'. I gotta get busy and do somethin'."

He cast a sidelong glance at the flow of automobiles.

"Huh," he grunted. "If you guys know what a swell kid Anne is, let her know they need your dough."

But the great river of motor cars sped on heedlessly. Some grim railroad train of the iron of existence came to Stuffy as he waited.

"All these guys with loads o' money, an' I had to be the one to find Anne an' her mother. Why couldn't I be rich?"

There was a trace of bitterness in his thoughts—a bitterness unusual in Stuffy. In spite of himself he fell to dreaming again.

"Gosh! What if I was rich! What if one of those guys did adopt me!
Or just give me a little money so I could help Anne!"

A large sedan drove up at the curb and Stuffy seized a paper and thrust it into the outstretched hand. The exchange was quickly made, paper for money, and the car rolled on its way.

A large sedan drove up at the curb
and Stuffy seized a paper and thrust
it into the outstretched hand. The
exchange was quickly made, paper
for money, and the car rolled on its

Stuffy stared in unbelieving surprise for an instant, then glanced up at the moving car. The license bore the same number the onlooker had given him the previous evening.

A smile slowly spread over Stuffy's face until it became a broad grin. The passing motor cars seemed to pour in benevolent wishes as he pictured Anne's small face wrapped in happy smiles.

Cross Hidden in Tree
Many Hundred Years

When they passed through the forest of England last night, old St.
Paul's in London town was a day's journey away from the forest, or perhaps they were wandering through a Moorish forest in the back of a cave.

For hundreds of years the cross remained hidden. The shining metal was in a big tree. The forest in the picture to be seen it was who had carved the cross passed on, and many generations followed him.

Then when the Twelfth century had been running 27 years, the long life of the tree came to an end. The end day came when it was to be cut down, and a noble tree it was, for centuries.

It had seen vast changes in the world. The man who has now happened it up to a citizen of Greater London who can reach St. Paul's which Sir Christopher Wren had built long after the old tree was planted. In half an hour from the place where the tree grew—a change that would have surrounded the planter of the tree to cutting up the old tree the woodman found buried in its heart the Maltese cross—London Times.

Tobacco Mixtures

Klimklimk, an Algonquin word signifying "mixed by hand" is used to designate a mixture of tobacco with some other plant, either for the purpose of imparting a more pleasant odor or to reduce the strength, as the trade tobacco alone is extremely intense to suit the fancy of the Indian.

Among the western tribes tobacco was usually used by mixing it with grass, sugar and butter, the root leaves and roots of two kinds of tree, manzanita leaves, Intermountain weed, two-headed dogwood bark, or sagebrush and a variety of other herbs.

Often Enough

Little James was kneeling beside his bed, saying his prayers. When about half way through the last prayer he stopped.

"James, what's the matter? Why don't you say the rest of the prayer?" said his mother.

"Oh, mother, I am so tired and sleepy, and I have told the Lord that prayer often enough. He knows it as well as I do. Please let me go to bed."

Items of Interest taken from The Bethel News of March 30, 1898.

Mr. B. C. Snyder, who has been employed at the News office for the past eighteen months, has concluded his services at this office and accepted a position in a printing office at North Conway. During Mr. Snyder's stay in Bethel he has made many friends whose best wishes attend him as he leaves to begin his work at North Con-Wild river has now opened its channel to the great river, though it flows a portion, if not the entire way between walls of ice. The ice has also gone out of the Androscoggin.

Charles P. Reed of Hartford was in town last week selling flavoring extracts and medicines of his own making.

In the show case at the News office can be seen a Roxbury russet apple which grew in 1896. It was presented to us by Mrs. S. I. French and is in a perfectly sound condition.
